To whom it may concern:

For the past fifteen years, first as a Registered nurse at the bedside and currently as the Nurse Manager of the Neurosciences Unit, I have worked with Jennifer Logan as a peer. I have yet to come across an individual who is as serious about her work as Jenn is. Whether it be holding unit staff accountable to meet regulatory metrics, be compliant with hospital or unit policies or leading the organization in fall prevention – Jenn always gives much more than 100 percent.

As a registered nurse, Jenn has provided excellent patient care and demonstrated understanding and compassion for her patients. She was always willing to assist her coworkers and seek opportunities to learn. Jenn established good rapport with her patients and their families. She was recognized by patients and their families for her quality care, outgoing personality and her ability to anticipate needs. Her co-workers recognized her for her ability to be an integral part of the team. Jenn always put the patients first and did not hesitate to lend a helping hand. Her communication skills, both oral and written, are superb. Her ability to differentiate information that needs to be communicated timely versus urgently is uncanny. Jenn instinctively interpreted cues from her patients and proactively provided what was needed.

As a nurse leader, Jenn's insightfulness and willingness to complete the work assigned to her, and that which she is yet to learn is mindboggling. She always goes the extra mile to help her patients and her staff with their problems – both medical and emotional.

Many situations arise when Jenn, without being asked, steps up and provides direction. She is very quick on her feet when it comes to organizing people and delegating tasks, proving that she is reliable, trustworthy, and has great leadership skills. It's these redeeming qualities that make her a great nurse leader in our organization.

I strongly recommend Jenn for any endeavor she pursues; she will be an asset on all fronts.

Sincerely,

Lisa Schryver
